Article VII: The government of the Irish free state shall afford to his morther providence.

Provisions also are made for the co-operation of the two parliaments in providing certain sateguards in the event of Ulster remaining out of the free state. Neither parliament, however, will be permitted to make laws endowing any particular religion, or to impose any religious disability. The treaty looks to Ireland in the future of undertaking its own coastal defense and provides that Ireland shall during war give the British forces necessary harbor and other facilities. FUNDING FOREIGN DEBTS

"There is pending a grant of authority to the authoritative branch of the government for the funding and settlement of our yeast foreign loans growing out of our grant of war credits. With the hands of the exceutive branch held impotent to deal with these debts, we are hindering urgent readjustment among our debtors and accomplishing nothing for ourselves. I think it is fair for the congress to assume that the executive branch of the government would adopt no major policy in dealing with these matters, which would conflict with the purpose of congress in authorizing the loans, certainly not without asking congressional approval, but there are minor problems incident to prudent loan fransactions and the safeguarding of our interests which can not even be attempted without this authorization. It will be helpful to ourselves, and it will improve conditions among our debtors, if funding and the zettlement of defaulted interest may be negotiated.
